About This Game

Greenwood high school, located in a remote mountainous area, two students found themselves trapped and vulnerable. The place they once knew has changed in unsettling ways, haunted by evil creatures. To escape, they must explore the mysterious campus filled with ominous objects and puzzles. How will they survive in this ever threatening environment? Could they return to safety in one piece?

Set in a fictitious world in the 1960s Taiwan under martial law, Detention, the story-driven atmospheric horror incorporated East Asian elements rarely used in games. Taoism, Buddhism, Chinese mythology, the game draws on local Taiwanese cultural references to tell a unique and terrifying story.

In this 2D atmospheric horror side-scroller, players navigate the main characters in a classic point and click fashion to explore a high school where evil encroaches. While hiding from the rampaging monsters, you are to find items to interact with in the otherworldly rooms. And as more mysteries unveiled, the dark past of a cursed school will finally surface.

The Chinese are triggered over the fact the developers threw some shade onto their Winnie looking presidentt. They got so salty to the point where they took down the developers\u2019 latest horror game. Who cares? The game is very well made and it was actually scary. Devotion from what I\u2019ve heard was amazing too but the hans got too triggered by it.

They buy this game just to write a negative review on it. What a self own LMAO YOU\u2019re SUPPORTING THE DEVS BY BUYING THE GAME AND STIRRING A CONTROVERSY AROUND IT MAKING OTHER PEOPLE BUY IT TOO. So stooopid. This is getting out of hand! It\u2019s time for the Islamic Turkistan Party takes over the han state! My lawd.

P.S. I find it ironic how Devotion (a game about cults) got took down by people who worship their leader lulz. A sorrowful history that every Taiwanese should understand.

Democracy is Taiwan's core value.

Taiwan is not the part of China(ROC or PRC).
